MINICAB DRIVER JAILED FOR DANGEROUS DRIVING

Martin Sadler, a minicab driver, has been jailed for six months for mowing down a parking attendant, John Tamele-Ssali. He was hit by the VW Passat minicab, which he had ticketed, throwing him onto the bonnet so hard it broke the windscreen. Jailing Sadler for six months at Snaresbrook Crown Court, Judge Tudor Owen said: "However irritating - justifiable or otherwise depending on the circumstances - motorists may find traffic wardens to be, they have a public duty to perform. It is always regrettable to send someone of your age to prison but what you did was so serious you leave me with no alternative."

Snaresbrook Crown Court was told that Mr Tamele-Ssali had put a £90 fixed penalty on Sadler's car in Haberdasher Street, Shoreditch. Then Sadler hurled abuse at Mr Tamele-Ssali and drove off - only to drive at the warden a few moments later.

Prosecutor David Radcliffe said: "The Passat hit the traffic warden, it took out his legs first. The traffic warden then hit the windscreen of the Passat."

Judge Owen disqualified Sadler from driving for 12 months and ordered him to sit an extended test to regain his licence. Sadler, of Hackney, admitted dangerous driving and unlawful wounding on 29 October 2007.
